

Preparing your pets for an emergency

Having an emergency plan is recommended for all families. This plan should include your pets too! Follow the steps below to make sure your pet is safe during a disaster.

Put together an emergency kit for your pets. Your pets emergency kit will need:

- A lead, collar, muzzle, a carrier, and a toy (optional),
- Bedding and/or blankets
- Enough food and water for at least 3 days

- Bowls for food and water
  - Any medications and first aid supplies
  - Your contact information
  - Vaccination records, microchip number and registration number.
- Any large animals and/or livestock should be moved into a paddock that is free from floodwaters and power lines. Ensure they have food, water, shelter and are secured.

THE 3 P'S

Only flush the 3 P's Pee, Poo and Paper

Flushing anything other than the 3P's - pee, poo and toilet paper may result in a sewer overflow in your home, or a blockage known as a 'fatberg' in our sewers.

Every year, water utilities remove hundreds of sewerage system blockages caused by wipes and other rubbish. This build-up of flushed rubbish can also cause significant damage to your household pipes and lead to overflows in our natural environment.

All this damage and cost are completely avoidable.

Wipes, even those labeled as flushable, do not break down as efficiently as toilet paper. The best way to dispose of wipes, face tissues, sanitary products and cotton buds is in the bin.
